THE LAST ENDS

Oh, how we must thank God for having the Catholic faith. Poor are the souls who have no faith and wander in blindness, who think only of the things of this world. When they think or have occasion to think of the things of the future, of what will happen after death, they prefer rather to close their eyes, to close their ears, not to speak of those things, so as not to have to think about them.

These poor souls who, in their blindness and in their attachment to the things of this world, close their eyes to the most beautiful things that await us in Heaven.

What does the Church teach us about the afterlife that awaits us all? This life (on earth) is short.

The Church tells us that there are four possibilities for souls, four places which they can be placed, three of which are permanent and one provisional. The definitive locations are Heaven, Limbo, and Hell.

The temporary place is Purgatory. This is what the Church teaches us. There are no other venues. Either it is eternal happiness, immediately acquired, or it is eternal happiness acquired through a more or less prolonged stay in Purgatory to purify our souls from our venial sins, from the penalties due to the sins we have committed.

Or it is Limbo for the souls of those who did not sin personally and died with original sin, like all those children who die... Alas, when one thinks of all the abortions, all these children are deprived of sanctifying grace, deprived of the eternal happiness of Heaven, they are not unhappy, but they are nevertheless in this incredible deprivation of an ineffable happiness, of which we have no idea here below. This is Limbo.

And then finally Hell. Well, the souls too - in a way - will each take their place. Compared to what? In relation to their relationship with Our Lord Jesus Christ.

Are we really followers of Our Lord Jesus Christ? Do we love Him with all our hearts? Shall we die in this love, saying, I offer my whole life; I offer everything, I offer my sufferings; I offer my death for Our Lord Jesus Christ; to be united to Our Lord Jesus Christ; to make amends for sins, out of love for Our Lord?

If, on the other hand, we have punishments to expiate, it will be Purgatory. And in Purgatory, we can't do anything on our own. Let us not forget this, my dear brethren. Let us not forget that in Purgatory, the souls in Purgatory cannot do anything by themselves; they cannot merit; they are fixed in what they are, they simply have a time of pain to expiate. But this time can be shortened by us, by the faithful who are still on earth. We must pray for the souls in Purgatory because we can merit for them, by our prayers, by our sacrifices; offering our sacrifices for the souls in Purgatory, for the souls of our relatives, our friends, all those who suffer in Purgatory. We can ease their pain. They can no longer do it for themselves; they are waiting for the end of this purification, this Purgatory, and they hope that those who are on earth, their friends, their relatives, will pray for them in order to deliver them as quickly as possible from these sorrows and that they will go and join the elect in Heaven.

This is what Holy Church teaches us. At least things are clear, simple, natural, good for us, which encourage us to walk in the path of perfection. And this is why it is so profitable, and I congratulate all those who have already attended the spiritual exercises of St. Ignatius, who have made retreats, to meditate on our last ends; to meditate on these magnificent horizons that God presents to us on the occasion of his Resurrection. All that we know here on earth is nothing compared to what we will know if God welcomes us into his Paradise. It is St. Paul who says: There is no proportion between what we are here and what is in heaven. So let us meditate on these things and strive to be welcomed by the angels.
